Sand Creek Massacre National Historic Site

On November 29, 1864, Colonel John M. Chivington led approximately 700 U.S. volunteer soldiers to a village of about 800 Cheyenne and Arapaho people camping along the banks of Big Sandy Creek in southwestern Colorado. Although the Cheyenne and Arapaho people believed they were under the protection of the U.S. Army, Chivington's troops attacked and killed about 150 people, nearly all women, children, and the elderly. Ultimately, the massacre was condemned following these federal investigations.

Sand Creek Massacre National Historic Site was authorized by Public Law 105-455 on November 2, 2000. The purpose of the Act was to recognize the national significance of the massacre in American history and its ongoing significance to the people of the United States. The Act directed the Secretary of the Interior to establish the Sand Creek Massacre National Historic Site once the NPS has acquired sufficient land from willing sellers to preserve, commemorate, and interpret the massacre. Acquisition of a sufficient amount of land has not yet occurred. Currently, the majority of land within the authorized boundary is privately owned and is not open to the public. The NPS is working in partnership with the Conservation Fund, the Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes, and the State of Colorado towards establishment of the Sand Creek Massacre National Historic Site.
